Join us on 19 August 2014 for an informative session with Dr Yvonne McNulty, an Associate in the School of Business, who will share her tips on teaching diverse learners. Drawing on more than a decade of experience across different cultural contexts, Yvonne will distill tried-and-tested strategies that she has used successfully with the students she has taught.

During this session, Yvonne will share:

- Deductive and inductive approaches to teaching
- How to overcome the ‘silent treatment’ in classroom discussions and increase responsiveness and interaction
- The value of bringing ‘real life’ experience into teaching through innovative mediums
- The various roles required of lecturers’ to successfully engage diverse learners

Be entertained by Yvonne’s anecdotal accounts of her surprising and insightful real-life encounters while teaching in different cultures. She will also provide recommended resources to help with your teaching practice.

Dr Yvonne McNulty is a results-driven scholar practitioner with over 10 years of consulting and lecturing experience and a proven track record in publishing in academic and industry journals. She serves on the editorial board of three academic journals and has published more than 50 refereed articles and book chapters. Yvonne co-authored the best-selling management book, “Managing Expatriates: A Return on Investment Approach” (Business Expert Press, 2013). Her research has been featured in The New York Times, Economist Intelligence Unit, and on BBC Radio. An experienced global citizen who has lived, taught and worked in Australia, USA, Singapore, and Shanghai, Yvonne has deep experience in international business research and running multi-country global research projects. She was a consultant to multinational companies such as Deloitte, Brookfield, and Cartus.